Collective Impact Public Policy Considerations

1. Use a Children’s Cabinet or coordinating body to align policies and funding.
2. Provide flexibility with funding coupled with accountability for results.
3. Reform auditing and accounting guidelines.
4. Provide funding for backbone functions.
5. Arm backbones with the data systems they need.
6. Fund research and evaluations about partnerships.
7. Explicitly allow new coordinating bodies, strategic plans and data systems to use and build upon existing ones.
Political Sustainability - Keep the Connections

• Summative Assessment of Coordinating Body

• External Stakeholder Engagement

The Role of Children's Cabinets in Advancing and Sustaining Systems of Care: Indiana’s Commission on Improving the Status of Children
Overview of the Indiana Family Social Services Administration

The Division of Mental Health and Addiction (DMHA) is one of six agencies that are within Family and Social Services Administration umbrella.

- Bureau of Developmental Disabilities Services (BDDS)
- Department of Family Resources (DFR)
- The Office of Early Childhood and Out-of-School (OECOSL)
- Office of Medicaid Policy and Planning (OMPP)
- Division of Developmental Rehabilitation Services (DDRS)
Key Events That Moved The System

DMHA restructured the agency in which Child and Adolescent Services became it’s own bureau.

- Senate Bill 125 went into law effective July 1, 2013. The Commission on Improving the Status of Children (CISC) became a multi-branch statewide commission aimed at improving the status of children in Indiana. This mandate was spearheaded by Justice Loretta Rush.

- The CISC, in cooperation with other stakeholders and commission members were tasked with studying issues concerning vulnerable youth, review and make recommendations concerning pending legislation and promote information sharing and best practices.

- Developed Enhanced Multidisciplinary Disciplinary Teams (EMDT) across state agencies.

- In 2014, received System of Care Implementation Sustainability Grant.
